Hi! My name is Anthony Fadil and I am a McDonough peer ambassador.

Hometown: Los Angeles, California

Class: 2017

Major: International Business and Finance

Extracurricular Activities: McDonough Academic Council, Georgetown Admissions Ambassador Program, Georgetown Retail and Luxury Association, Discovery Initiative

Interesting Fact about Me: I have very good luck spotting famous people.

What made you choose Georgetown's McDonough School of Business?
I realized quickly that the McDonough offers a first-rate, practical business curriculum that would also afford me the freedom to study in other areas within the university. In turn, I was most drawn to the fact that I could receive an incredible business education while pursuing many other interests.

What are the best things about being a Hoya?
One of the many benefits of being a Hoya is the access to resources that you have. Whether it be study abroad, interesting guest speakers, professional opportunities, or the alumni network, your time at the university will be nothing short of exciting and full of adventure.

Why do you love D.C.?
Georgetown’s location lends itself to an international perspective, which I value since it provides me with an awareness of what is going on in the world. D.C. is a very vibrant city with a lot to offer, including politics, museums, restaurants, and historical sites.

Share a defining and/or transformative classroom/educational moment?
My introduction to macroeconomics professor worked in the Federal Reserve for 30 years, so it was very inspiring to learn from him and his first-hand experience. Additionally, his class focused strongly on news, which was amazing since it gave me a better understanding of how trends on the macro level can be understood through market behavior and current events.

What is your advice to incoming Hoyas?
Be active and take advantage of every opportunity possible! You will hear this a lot, but Georgetown truly has so much to offer—-it is up to you to seek these opportunities out and make the most of them.